Korean Tea Culture Association Visits Huree University

On September 7, more than 20 executives from the Korean Tea Culture Association visited Huree University and shared a meaningful time of cultural exchange. The Korean Tea Culture Association has long been dedicated to promoting the globalization of Korean traditional culture, particularly by introducing the excellence of Korean tea to the world.

This visit was made possible through the connection of Dr. Soon-Hoon Chung, President of the Globalization of Hanbok Foundation, who has been actively engaged in advancing traditional Korean culture on the international stage.

During the visit, the association presented an introduction to its history and activities, highlighting the cultural and spiritual values of Korean tea and its potential in the global community. A demonstration of traditional Korean tea etiquette followed, allowing participants to experience the humility and respect embodied in the process of preparing and sharing tea.

The event was not merely a presentation but served as a valuable platform for mutual understanding and cultural exchange between the university and the association. Faculty members and students who attended the event expressed that they were deeply impressed by the realization that Korean tea culture goes beyond a simple beverage tradition, carrying values that cultivate mindfulness and foster communal bonds.

A representative of Huree University remarked, "We hope that this visit will lead to closer collaboration between our university and the Korean Tea Culture Association, and further strengthen international exchanges centered on Korean traditional culture."

This gathering, where tradition and modern education came together, is expected to hold significant meaning in the continuing journey of globalizing Korean cultural heritage.
